Our thoughts and prayers are with the bereaved members of the family at this time.

Dr. Shankar Krishnaswamy - former Head of the department of cardiology passed away on 6th February, 2025. He was born on February 26, 1938. At a young age, his family migrated from Burma to India and settled near Coimbatore, where he completed his schooling at Stanes school before joining Christian Medical College (CMC) in 1958. From the very beginning, he distinguished himself as one of the brightest students in his batch, deeply committed to his studies while also nurturing a profound love for music. A talented musician, he actively participated in college music programs alongside fellow musicians Donald Roberts and Vijayasenan. As the guitarist for the band The Cracker Jacks, he played at numerous college events, leaving behind fond memories for many.

After earning his MD in Medicine from CMC Vellore, Dr. Shankar joined the fifth batch (1969) of the DM Cardiology training program at CMC and later became the fourth Head of the Department. A pioneer in the field of cardiology, he played a crucial role in revolutionizing coronary angiography in India. Between 1974 and 1976, Dr. Shankar trained under Dr. Goffredo Gensini, Director of Cardiology at St. Joseph's Hospital, New York. His contributions were recognized in Dr. Gensini's authoritative manual on coronary angiography. Upon returning to India, Dr. Shankar introduced the Sones technique for coronary angiography at CMC Vellore, a groundbreaking step at the time. The procedure, performed using the brachial approach, was a crucial requirement for the CABG programme, starting at a few centers in India around that time. In the early days, angiograms were recorded on cine films, which were painstakingly developed in a darkroom by Mr. C. Babu and Mr. John Krishnamurthy. The process was laborious, and with no playback option available in the cath lab, the only person who could reliably interpret the angiograms was the one who performed them—often Dr. Shankar himself.

Dr. Shankar meticulously documented every coronary angiogram performed at CMC Vellore, creating a detailed database far ahead of its time. His foresight led to the digital storage of this data, a remarkable achievement in an era when computers were not widely used in clinical practice. The first computer for the Cardiology Department was purchased using his earnings from a two-week WHO assignment in Nepal. True to his curiosity and love for technology, he dismantled and reassembled the computer within two months of its arrival. His extensive clinical and angiographic database of over 4,000 patients, created almost single-handedly in SPSS format (version 4), provided invaluable insights into coronary artery disease in Indian patients. Dr. Richard from the Biostatistics Department assisted him in data analysis, leading to multiple publications that shaped the understanding of heart disease in India. With over 130 publications and numerous citations in international journals, Dr. Shankar collaborated with ICMR and WHO on epidemiological studies related to coronary and rheumatic heart diseases in and around Vellore.

Dr. Shankar's most significant contribution to CMC was his dedication to sustaining the Cardiology Department and the DM Cardiology course after the untimely passing of Dr. I.P. Sukumar in 1985. For a period in 1986, he was the only consultant in the department, single-handedly managing patient care, teaching, catheterization procedures, and administrative responsibilities with the help of postgraduate students. He played a key role in advancing interventional cardiology at CMC, initiating coronary angioplasty in 1988 with Dr. P.C. Rath and balloon mitral valvotomy in 1990 with Dr. Niraj Prasad. An entire generation of cardiologists owes their training in coronary angiography to him.

Dr. Shankar's interests extended far beyond medicine. An avid electronics enthusiast, he personally built electronic clocks for three areas of the Cardiology Department, which functioned for years. When a computer from the Nuclear Medicine Department was condemned, he salvaged it and spent countless evenings tinkering with it, much like a child with a Meccano set. His love for music remained undiminished throughout his life. A gifted singer and guitarist, he surprised colleagues at a departmental Christmas dinner in 1989 by picking up a guitar and singing Next Stop is Vietnam. In retirement, he took up learning the piano, demonstrating the same dedication and enthusiasm that marked his professional life.

In recognition of his immense contributions to cardiology and medical education, the cardiology department had honored Dr. Shankar Krishnaswami with the Mentor to Generations of Students award in 2024.

Dr. Shankar was married to Dr. Hemalatha Airan, a distinguished pathologist and fellow CMC graduate (Batch of 1958). He is survived by his son, Dr. Rajiv Karthik who continues their legacy as a professor of infectious diseases at CMC, daughter in law Sheby Rajiv, welfare officer in the directorate and grandchildren Rohan and Leah. Dr. Shankar's expertise extended beyond his medical and academic achievements. He was a mentor, a musician, a technologist, and above all, a cherished friend. His warmth, intelligence, and unwavering dedication to his family, students, and community set him apart as a truly remarkable individual. Though he is no longer with us, his legacy endures through the lives he touched and the knowledge he imparted.
